On Monday morning of last week, it will be remembered, an extensive robbery of gold and silver watches was committed at the jewelry store of Mr. Fintuch, on Churchstreet, Toronto, Ganada. Considerable mystery surrounded the affair. On Sunday morning last, a telegraphic dispatch was received at Toronto, from the Mayor at Oakville, which afforded not only the long-sought information, but communicated the intelligence that the possession of the booty by one of the thieves had led to an attempt on the part of one of them to murder the other by shooting him. It appears that three men were concerned in the robbery. Their names are Andrew Adams, Edward Short and Thomas Cummins. They were all in Toronto on Saturday, drinking. In the evening, Adams and Cummins started for Oakville. Short was much intoxicated. Cummins had in his possession eight of the stolen watches, some of the lockets and chains, and also some money; Adams had none of the plunder, but he was furnished with a double-barrelled pistol, loaded with slugs.

Whether he then first conceived the horrid design of murdering his companion for the purpose of securing the plunder to himself, it is impossible to say, but would appear that the act was premeditated, for it was stated that Adams was heard to say to Cummins, "I wonder if this pistol was discharged at my head, as it is now loaded, whether it would that Adams was heard to say to Cummins, "I wonder if this pistol was discharged at my head, as it is now loaded, whether it would that Adams was heard to say to Cummins, "I wonder if this pistol was discharged at my head, as it is now loaded, whether it would that he had not killed the man, and becoming alarmed for his personal safety, immediately took to his heels, without attemption.

ing that he had not killed the man, and becoming alarmed for his personal safety, immediately took to his heels, without attempting to get possession of the property. Cummins, although so seriously injured and suffering from the loss of blood, managed to crawl to some habitation in the locality, and give information of what had happened. The police were apprised of the matter, and a dispatch was sent to Toronto giving a description of Adams and Short.

Adams and Short were soon afterward arrested. Adams's real name is now said to be William Whitney, and that he is a deserter from the United States Army. He is about twenty-one years of age.

Alleged Literary Discovery-Pilgrims Progress a Plagiarism.

The Courier des Etats Unis contains the following singular announcement under the head of Fails Divers :

of Fails Divers:

"There is not in Great Britain a more remarkable book than 'Pilgrim's Progress.' It is a sort of Telemachus of Protestant religious literature, and is more highly esteemed by the English than Fenelon's chef d'acuvre. Hitherto this work has been attributed to John Bunyan. But a young woman, named Catharine Isabella Curt, has just published in London a translation of an old French manuscript in the Brisish Museum, which is, almost word for word, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. The manuscript is the work of a clergyman, G. de Greville, who lived in the fifteenth century. Its title, in Norman English, is 'Pylegremage of the Sowle.' The printer, Caxton, who occupied the same Gosition in Lendon as the Etiennes in Paris, published in 1843 a translation of this manuscript, of which the authenticity appears incontestible. It would seem, therefore, that the credit of this selebrated book belongs to France, although France hitherto has shown less appreciation of the original than England has bestowed on the copy."

We know nothing of the authority on which this statement, which looks like a canard, is founded; but if the story should happen to be true, it will create no little hubbub in the literary world.

A safe, which had for twenty years been A safe, which had for twenty years been the receptacle of the funds and confidence of Lyman Stockbridge, Esq., and for a few months past those of his successor, Mr. William B. Smith, was observed to send out small whiffs of smoke on Wednesday. The attempt to get at the fire was unsuccessful, as it appeared to be lodged between the inner and outer coatings of the safe. The books and papers were removed, and the safe and outer coatings of the safe. The books and papers were removed, and the safe turned out of doors, where its filling of sawdust, plank, or shavings, smouldered away, and the thing collapsed. The remains, still smoking, drew a curious crowd around them most of the day. Appropriate inscriptions were appended to it, testifying to its complete protection from fire and robbers of every thing which had been entrusted to its keeping for twenty years. It had taken fire from the heat of a stove which stood a few inches distant, and the result was the detection of about as much of a cheat as is often developed.

DEATH OF OLD MONTAGER.—J. B. Mentagne, one of the most singular characters of our city, was found dead on Sunday morning in his shop on Chartres, opposite Jefferson-street. The old man has been a resident of New Orleans for ever forty years, engaging his time principally in selling birds and speculating in eggs. He was eccentric to the extreme on some points, and has brought several claims against the city of amounts from $500,000 to $1,500,000. One of these was for discovering a supposed oure for cholers, another for furniture alleged to have been destroyed by a mob, and another for property belonging to him used in the making or extension of streets. He had placards in French, Spanish and English hung up in his shop window, offering these claims for sale at enormous prices. The old man died of lockjaw, alone in his miserable little retreat. It is believed he has large quantities of gold and silver hid away in his shop.—New Orleans Bee. DEATH OF OLD MONTAGNE.-J. B. Mentagne

About the close of the entertainment a general muss was got up by some rowdies, exhibiting their skill in pugilism, which very much alarmed the more peaceable and gentle portion of the audience. After the affair was over, and the people had dispersed, a gentleman who had lost his pocket-book was searching for it, when, to his surprise, he discovered on the floor a small infant, dead. Extraordinary Attempt at Murder in An Enthusiastic Admirer of the Drama-Playing to an Audience of One.

Governor Foster, the well-known theatrical manager, some time ago organized a theatrical manager, some time ago organized a theatrical company to play short engagements in various towns and cities of the West. A week or two ago they arrived at Bueyrus, Chio, where bills were issued, a hall rented, properties arranged, and everything put in order for a short engagement. During their stay a novel incident occurred, which is told so graphically by the Journal of that village that we give it in its own words:

own words:

Mr. Foster was sitting in the hotel, ruminating, in all probability, upon the full house he was to have in the evening, when a stranger entered the room, with the bill for the evening's entertainment in his hand.

"Are you the manager of the Theater?"

"Are you the manager of the Theater?"
quoth the stranger.

"I am, sir," replied Mr. Foster.

"You are to play Richard III, to-night?"

"Yes, sir."

"I am, and always have been, extremely fond of theatricals, but never have had an opportunity of seeing Richard III."

"Very well, sir, come in to-night."

"Unfortunately, I leave town this evening, on the 6:46 train. Now how much money would induce your company to play Richard for me, this afternoon?"

Foster thinking the stranger was joking.

for me, this afternoon?"

Foster thinking the stranger was joking, replied that he would do it for twenty-five deliars. The stranger looked at the bill again, and inquired what would be the extra charge for the Rough Diamond. To carry out his joke, Foster replied ten deliars. To his utter surprise, the stranger "pulled his weasel," counted out thirty-five deliars, and handed it to him, remarked that he would like to have the play commence no later than two c'clock play commence no later than two o'clock.

Foster got the company together, and related the circumstance. The idea of playing Richard to an audience of one, was so excessively ridiculous, and so new in their experience that

Two o'clock came, and the solitary audience assembled. Choosing an eligible position, and cocking his feet upon the back of the seat in front of him, he waited patiently for the performance to begin. The bell rang, up went the curtain, and the play commenced. Never did actors do better. They all exerted themselves to give their patron an entertainment fully worth the price paid for it, and they succeeded. The stranger applauded vigorously at different points, and at the close of the play called Mr. Fannin before the curtain, who responded in a neat little speech. A dance and a song followed, after which the farce of the Rough Diamond was played. The audience laughed, roared and applauded, and, as at the close of the first piece, called out the leading setors. Who this liberal patron of the drama is we know not, but a more eccentric operation we never witnessed.—Pittaburg Diapatch, October 31. Two o'clock came, and the solitary audience

The Currency of China.

The only currency of the empire is the chien or cash, a copper or brass coin somewhat smaller and much thinner than a United States smaller and much thinner than a United States cent, bearing on one side a Chinese and on the other a Mantchoo inscription, and perforated with a square hole. These cash are strung in hundreds on lengths of rice-straw, and ten of these hundreds, forming a string, are equal to one cunce or dollar's worth of silver. The bundles of one hundred are seldom untied, and thus it happens that cash of high antiquity are frequently discovered by the few foreigners who have interested themselves in this, the most ancient of existing coinage. The cash of the seventh century of our era differed only in the inscription from those of the present day, and are sometimes found in circulation. The debased cash, to which I have already alluded. debased cash, to which I have already alluded are coined in immense quantities by dishonest mandarins, as well as by private speculators, and are mixed with the government cash in as a proportion as possible. In some of the Northern provinces ch'ao, or large cash, worth 10, 50 or 100 of the small coin, are in circulation. Foreigners, however, coin, are in circulation. Foreigners, however, unless they especially seek it, seldom see the cash. The only currency acknowledged by the people at present is the Mexican dollar, which, however, has entirely lost the factitious value it once bore. It circulates at its commercial value of 4s. 2d. sterling. The Carolus dollar, which was once worth 7s. 6d. sterling, will now scarcely circulate at par, and United States and South American dollars are ontien States and South American dollars are not in favor. Small change is supplied by English shillings and American halves and quarters; below this, the sycce, or broken silver, comes into play; and when small change is scarce, as it very often is, one either goes without, or accepts cheroots as a circulating madium.

Pere La Chaise.

Pere la Chaise, as is well known, is the reat burying-ground of Paris. The New Orleans Picayune's correspondent of that city mentions the following interesting particulars

I visited Pere la Chaise a few days ago, and the Jewish Cemetery being open, (which is something unusual,) I entered it to visit poor Rachel's tomb; like most other French tombs, it is in the form of a chapel. It and the vault it is in the form of a chapel. It and the vault of the Rotchschild family are approached through a row of flowers about eight feet long, planted in beds set in stone, and raised four feet from the ground; the effect is striking. The chapel is literally crammed full of yellow wreaths and bouquets of flowers, all as fresh as if placed there an hour age; they must be renewed daily. I was surprised to see on the ledge (if it was a Papist chapel I should say alter) twenty or thirty letters, which had evidently come through the mails. What can be the meaning of this? They were placed there by the family. In the Rotschild's chapel there was a visiting card on the ledge. Isn't it a sirange custom? Pere la Chaise has recently received some magnificent tombs. cently received some magnificent tombs. Prince Demidoff has spent $20,000 on his mother's tomb, which, except General Gobert's, is the finest in the cemetery; and this sum of money has been absorbed by merely embellishing the old tomb. The other costly new tombs are one to Marshal Marmont's widow; one to Alfred de Musset; one to Souvestre, the novells; one to de Balzac; one to Pradier, the sculptor: one to Visconti, the architect of the new Louve. Beranger is buried in the same vault with Manuel, and his friends have contanted themselves with cutting his name on Manuel's tomb; that is cheap, certainly.

Virginia, they can not convict him on the count of treason.

The Court declined, saying the Constitution did not give rights and immunities alone, but also responsibilities. was taken, when the jury came in with their verdict.

An intense excitement prevailed in the Court-room. Brown sat up in his bed while the verdict was rendered. The jury find him guilty of treason, advising conspiracy with slaves and others to rebel, and of murder in the first degree. Brown lay down quietly, he said nothing, and there was no demonstration of any kind. Mr. Chilton moved an arrest of judgment, both on account of the errors in the indictment and errors in the verdict.

The objection in regard to the indictment has been already stated. The prisoner has been tried for an offense not appearing on the record of the Grand Jury. The verdict was not on each count separately, but a general verdict on the whole indictment. The prisoner has also been found guilty of both counts for murder of the same persons; it was manifest

He seemed calm and composed. The remainder of the day was spent in endeavoring to obtain a jury. The panel was not complete, when, at five o'clock the Court adjourned.

Curious Freak of Nature.

Mr. E. T. Bond, of Livingston County, exhibited to us yesterday a vegetable curiosity which instances the occasional wildness of Na-ture's freaks of imitation, the most singularly perfect model of a human hand and arm below the elbow, cast—if we may use the expression—in corn cob. It was simply an "ear" of the Indian staple, from which the kernels had been removed, leaving an infantile hand and arm, somewhat pock marked in appearance, from the indentions of the grain that gloved it, from the indentions of the grain that gloved it, but perfect in shape, as though a sculpture had wrought it. The exactness of the imitation will not be conceived, except by those who have seen it. With the exception of the fingers—to which the freaky "dame" could not possibly, with the clumsiest material she used, give quite due length and slenderness—there was nothing for the artist to take exception to. The thumb was fashioned and set precisely as it should be, the hollow of the palm was exact, the wrist was flattened and the arm rounded, as a sculptor would have done it, and act, the wrist was flattened and the arm rounded, as a soulptor would have done it, and to all its lines and proportions there was not the slightest deviation from the human model. It was certainly the strangest tunus naturae that we ever expect to see. It has been extensively shown, in a private way, in various parts of the country, and has everywhere excited the utmost wonder and interest. It seems to every one impossible to nearthe it to to every one impossible to ascribe it to "chance;" a cause appears to be almost an unquestionable necessity of a consequence so definite; and the theories it has provoked are as curious as itself.—Boston Express.

FEMALE TARGET COMPANY .- A target com-Female Target Company.—A target company, composed entirely of ladies, turned out in Hartford on the 21st inst. They used Sharp's rides. The following were the lucky shootors: First prize, cameo set, pin and earrings, Miss Lucy Mills; second prize, gift book, Mrs. Mary Coles; third prize, framed picture, Miss Sarah Bartlett; fourth prize, gift book, Miss Kate Smith; fifth prize, gift book, Miss Amanda Moore; sixth prize, ambrotype case, Miss Mary Warner; seventh prize, lady's ring, Miss Jonny Winship; eighth prize, lady's gauntlets, Mrs. Vibberts; ninth prize, Stuart's Life of Trambull, Miss Elizabeth Baker; tenth prize, gift book, Miss Jane Clark.

The editor of the Louisville Journal has been the occasion of a blunder as amusing as any of his own witticisms. The London Bookany of his own witticisms. The London Bookseller, a menthly organ of the publishing trade, commenting on a list of American announcements, says: "We observe a book announced on an almost forgotten subject, Prasticiana.
Mrs. Ellis may be reminded by this that the 'prentices of England have never yet been the subject of a history." This exquisite unconsciousness of the nature of the work (which, we need scarcely say, is a collection of good things from the paragon of Western wits) is inimitable.

An eccentric, but amiable and respected clergyman, in Aberdeenshire, on sitting down to compose his first discourse after having com-mitted matrimony, resolved to select a text which could not be twisted by his hearers into the remotest allusion to the connection he had so recently formed. But" the best laid schemes so recently formed. But" the best init schemes of nice and men gang aft agleg." To the great amusement of the less serious part of his congregation, the reverend gentleman gave out as the groundwork of his sermon: "For I would that ye all were even as I am this day, except these bonds."

A Southern paper having announced that there was no occupant of the jail in that district, except the jailor, a neighboring journal remarked "it was very good to be sure, that nobody is in jail—that is, if there is nobody in the district who ought to be in jail." Whereupon the first-named editor rejoins that he can assure his cotamporary there is nobody in the district who ought to be in jail, "and," he adds, "we trust he will not pass through the place and disturb the pleasant reflection."
